

How to Properly Place an Orange

By Zhi Qi Zhang

This is a tutorial on

How to Put an Orange on your Head.

First, acquire an orange and a head.

You were born with a head, so the orange is your only concern.

Visit your local grocery store, farmers market, ration dispensary, or orange juice stand to ask them nicely for an orange.

If they refuse, just take the orange regardless—they aren't going to miss a single orange in the wide scheme of things.

After you have obtained an orange, examine it.

Some people have attempted to follow this tutorial but have mistaken something that is not an orange for an orange.

If the orange looks like a grenade, smells like a grenade, and tastes like a grenade, then it might be a grenade.

Throw the faulty orange away.

Not using an orange can have disastrous consequences.

If you are in fact, the proud owner of an orange,

Feel the skin, feel the dimples of a proud natural orange.

If you are extremely excited, you may even have a taste of the sour sweet treat, after and only after, you have finished the tutorial.

Congratulations! You have completed the hardest part of this tutorial.

If you do not have an orange, seek asylum in the closest nuke grade bomb shelter.

Now, if you have an orange, return home, lock all of your doors, close your windows, and put it atop your head.

Try to ignore any loud concussive noises that may sidetrack you.

Do not attempt to look outside, you may see what you would not like to see.

If you are satisfied with the results, let the pride of accomplishment linger for a few seconds then attempt to remove the beforementioned orange.

You can now die happily knowing that you have had an orange atop your head.
